Air pollution guidance for school staff

Why do we need this guidance?

Primary

Special

Secondary

Levels of air pollution across the UK are at unsafe and illegal levels. Every year in the UK, it's estimated that the equivalent of 40,000 early deaths can be linked to breathing polluted air. Air pollution can stunt the growth of babies' and children's lungs. It can put them at risk from long-term lung damage, both at school and as they travel to school.

We've produced this guidance so school leaders, school staff and governing bodies, local authorities and academy trusts can work together to protect pupils and meet relevant health and safety legislation.

How does air pollution affect children?

Children are extremely vulnerable as they tend to breathe faster than adults, and their lungs are still growing. Air pollution is hugely damaging for all our health. From conception throughout our lives, being exposed to air pollution can increase everyone's risk of getting lung cancer and cardiovascular disease.

If a child breathes high levels of air pollution over a long period, they are at risk of:

- Their lungs not maturing properly
- Repeated infections, coughs and wheezing
- Lung conditions like asthma getting worse.
- Developing asthma during childhood or as an adult
- Lung cancer, heart disease, and possibly even diabetes, when they're older.

What can schools leaders and staff do to protect pupils?

The law requires school employers to protect pupils against risks to their health, including having a policy on reducing risks to health from air pollution. Head teachers and school leaders should create an action plan, involving pupils, parents, governors, teachers, support and maintenance staff, and policymakers.

Understand the problem and stay aware

Hard statistics and data can help school leaders and staff understand when pollution is worst and which measures could be the most effective at your school.

Installing air pollution monitors will help school leaders and staff understand when pollution is at its worst. The Department for Environment and Rural Affairs (DEFRA) publishes air pollution alerts and forecasts, which tell you when air pollution levels are high. This can help staff make decisions about outside PE lessons and sports days. It's also important to closely monitor vulnerable pupils—such as asthma or cystic fibrosis—on these days.

Resources for teachers

The British Lung Foundation and ClientEarth run a network of parent campaigners on air pollution. Schools can email campaigns@blf.org.uk to join the network.

Find out more at blf.org.uk or call our helpline on 03000 030 555. Sign up to our campaign for cleaner air at blf.org.uk/clean-air

About the Youth MHFA in Schools programme

This three year programme launched in Easter 2017 and is fully funded by the Department of Health with a value of £200 per person trained. In the programme's first year we aim to train 1,000 secondary school staff to become Youth MHFA Champions – someone with the skills to spot the signs of mental health issues in young people and guide them to a place of support. By the end of 2020 every secondary school in England will have been offered the opportunity to attend this training. This is a major step forward in our campaign to ensure that every school has access to Youth MHFA training - and our social mission to train one in ten people in Mental Health First Aid skills.

For more information, visit the Schools programme FAQ.

Host schools

If you work in or with a school that would be willing to host one of the first 100 training courses we would love to hear from you. In return the school will be offered up to four additional places per course. Please register your interest by emailing schools@mhfaengland.org telling us where in England the school is located.
